

The Dean, Faculty of Arts to present the following for the Conferment of the Degree of Doctor of Philosophy (Arts)

AMONE Charles

BAMUTAZE Yazidhi

Bamutaze addressed the question on why total soil loss from catchment cannot be extrapolated from empirical data collected from field plots, by coupling experimental data with geospatial techniques on Mt Elgon. He found that footpaths and roads generate more erosion and contribute greater sediment loading into streams than agricultural fields. The research underpins the need to incorporate roads and footpaths in the holistic management of mountain ecosystems. The study was supervised by Prof. Moses Tenywa and Dr. Festus Bagoora, with assistance from Prof. Majaliwa Mwanjalolo, Prof. Basalirwa and Dr. Magunda. Funding for the research was provided by SIDA- SAREC.

KIZZA Mukasa Jackson

Kizza Mukasa used ethnomethodological approach to conversation analysis to examine how interlocutors' exchanges are managed in discourse. Unlike earlier studies on paremiology which were based on hypothetical contexts, this study treated Luganda proverbs in context to probe the dynamics of their use. The procedure included recording and listening to recordings, transcription, explication and comparison of episodes. It revealed several things like: signposting, turn-taking, self and other repair, adjacency pairs and various interlocutors' responses. Prof. Livingstone Walusimbi, Dr. John Kalema, Dr. Edward Wamala and Dr. Aaron Mushengyezi formed his Doctoral Committee and financial support was provided by Makerere University.

NAMYALO Sauda (Ms)

Saudah Namyalo urges that, scientific and technological advancement of Uganda does not lie in promoting science and technology only. The need to empower languages, especially the local languages that convey the scientific and technological information stand central if we are to learn from China and Japan. Her research demonstrates this need and provides solution by providing model that can be used to create scientific terms in logical, systematic and coherent way. It was supervised by Prof. Walusimbi and Dr. Kalema and funded by DAAD.
