The increased level of corruption is due to lack of institutions to check the vice, Makerere University's Prof. Augustus Nuwagaba has said. He added that officials were "stealing with impunity". He was presenting a paper entitled 'The role of institutions in enhancing development in Uganda', at a students dialogue held at the Senate building, Makerere University. Nuwagaba, who holds a PhD in poverty eradication, said Uganda needs transformative leaders to wipe out corruption. He proposed that corrupt officials be executed, like was done in South Korea.
