

“As the government, we pledge total support to this important event that has since 2009 done much to ensure that the health of the global community is improved... I believe it’s in such gatherings that interventions are arrived at to guide policy-makers and implementers.”

Rt. Hon. Ruhakana Rugunda,
Prime Minister of Uganda

“This is a great opportunity for the world to focus on Africa’s health, learn from its successes, and lay strategies for future collaborations.”

Hon. Jane Ruth Aceng
Minister of Health, Uganda

“We are extremely delighted to be leading the preparations for the World Health Summit Regional Meeting 2020, the first ever to be hosted on African soil. With health professionals and other stakeholders in government and the private sector coming together. I’m optimistic that the meeting will stir us all to think better and work harder to achieve the Sustainable Development Goals, all of which pertain to health, whether directly or indirectly.”

Prof. Charles Ibingira
Principal, Makerere University College of Health Sciences
2020 International President, World Health Summit

Makerere University is Uganda’s largest and oldest institution of higher learning and one of Africa’s best. Its College of Health Sciences (MakCHS) is the leading medical research center in the region, with four schools: Public Health, Biomedical Sciences, Medicine, and Health Sciences. A key institution in both infectious and non-communicable diseases, MakCHS has made tremendous contributions to science over the years, with key breakthroughs that have contributed to WHO treatment guidelines.
